

Online Dating

Due to the advances in technology, a new form of dating has emerged. This is what you call online dating. Online dating is a service individuals use in order to try and find their ideal partner. Some people find it difficult to approach the opposite sex who they feel they are compatible with. So they go online and create a profile for themselves which others can view, in order to narrow down exactly what they are looking for. Online dating is an internet dating service that provides a comfortable and intimate environment where you can safely and conveniently search and find your perfect soul mate at the same time having lots of fun. Thousands of dating ads of singles that are looking for dating romance, intimacy and friendship is available for you to browse through. Online dating provides a venue where you can find your ideal companion.

Through online dating people are forced to judge others initially on their ideas rather than on their physical appearance. The anonymity and sense of mystery of meeting people online is what makes it so attractive. The World Wide Web is becoming a quicker and more efficient way to meet people. The virtual world continues to expand more and more through generations, as the growing trend towards cyber-communication enables us to shape our entire persona exactly the way we would like it. Technological and social advancements have also made online dating an attractive business proposition and are likely to have a major influence on the future nature of online dating.

However, warnings and precautions are conveyed to those taking part in online dating before they begin looking for love on the Net, particularly aimed towards females, so as to prevent incidents of rape and assault resulting from seemingly innocent meetings. Dating websites such as friendster.com have begun to get stricter in taking measures to prevent these so-called "weirdos" from accessing their site.

Emoticons are invented Internet language which includes images and abbreviations used to convey messages which are quick to type and understood by most regular chatroom-visitors. Some of the most frequently used emoticons are smiley faces :-), sad faces :-(, cheeky faces ;-), and abbreviations, such as LOL (laughs out loud). Online dating is very famous because of its convenience and advantages. The first and foremost advantage from dating online is that you can contact matches without revealing your real identity. You may meet the people you would otherwise never get the chance to encounter. Since you are not seeing each other, it gives the chance to both of you to reveal the thoughts and feelings without feeling awkward.

Whereas an inability to predict chemistry is perhaps one of the most limiting aspects of online dating, the advantages to this medium as a way of finding, introducing, and developing a relationship are significant and numerous. The increasing popularity of online dating is evidence to the multiple advantages.